COLEMAN INCORPORATED

Lieutenant Governor Signs Order in Council. Coleman is Erected into a Town Municipality

"Proclamation just issued as of the tenth." These epoch making words were flashed yesterday to Chairman Cameron and the long looked for "incorporation" made Coleman a town. The message quickly spread through the town and a feeling of relief was felt as the long struggle was now over and a new furrow broken in our history. Already plans for a huge celebration are underway. It is expected that speeches will be delivered and a civic "At-home" will be held at the Opera house next Tuesday evening. Officials from the neighboring villages will be invited to attend and share with Coleman in her natal day proceedings.

HARRY GATE, Returning Officer.

History of the Struggle for Incorporation

The most beneficial things are invariably the hardest to attain. Ever since Coleman became an organized village it immediately became apparent to the citizens, business men and miners alike, that the erection of the village of Coleman into a town municipality, was a direct step in the advancement of Coleman.

At first several prominent citizens opposed the step as being too premature owing to the existing financial conditions. However as the village grew many improvements became necessary, streets and sidewalks had to be extended and a road to be built around the bluff and above all proper sanitary improvements in the shape of sewerage system. These improvements required money and the only salvation for the village was to enter township, when it could borrow to the extent of ten per cent of its assessment.

Prior to the necessary legal proceedings to obtain incorporation a series of preliminary meetings were held. Opposition at once developed in these meetings and lively debates followed. The opponents pointed to Fernie and other sister cities as glaring examples of high taxation from incorporation. The claim was raised that we were too young for incorporation. That we had nothing to instal to borrow large sums of money for.

On two questions the property holders seemed to be a unit that of an enlarged water system and a road over the bluff. The first vote in the council chamber was on a resolution to take legal steps with a view to incorporation. The vote stood 44 to 5.

Another meeting was afterwards held to request the council to take a poll of the property holders. This vote was taken in May with H. Gate as Returning Officer. The result of the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of erecting to the status of a town. The vote stood as follows:

For—111
Against—17
Spoiled—1
Total—129

The council immediately defined the boundaries of Coleman and took the census of Coleman and the application for erection into a town appeared in the Provincial Gazette. The legal proceedings being all carried out satisfactory, the Lieutenant Governor proclaimed Coleman a town dating from September 10th, 1910.

To the village council the large measure of credit is due for fighting for incorporation. Notwithstanding stout opposition they put before the property holders a straight business proposition. Others who were sturdy supporters of the incorporation proposition were W. L. Quimette, L. A. Manly, T. W. Barker, W. Evans, A. M. Morrison, D. J. Hill, H. Gate, P. Willmott, W. Pearson, H. Smith, S. Janosak, and J. Pisony.

The Coleman Miner, in recognition of its duty to the public published weekly speeches, correspondence and editorials bearing on the live question of the day. In conclusion we would say that we sincerely believe Coleman has bettered herself, both in financial and municipal circles.

BACKWOODS' PHILOSOPHY.

Being Some Extracts From Old Abe Ward's Diary.

Abe Ward lived many years ago in the backwoods of Northern Ontario, when those parts were only just becoming known to the outside world. He was a good bushman, with a kind heart and a wise head. In fact, his memory is kept green by the fact that his generation around Simon Creek by numerous tales of the "age of the bush."

Far away from the influence of progressive civilization, Abe thought and worked and lived by rules of his own, and even some wise precepts for his neighbors. Nobody could tell anything about Abe. His past life was a closed book. Where he came from and what he had been was never known. Abe rarely talked, and when he did he would not be drawn into a conversation about himself. He was a great favorite, however, with the whole countryside. Even Jim, Faber and Peter Shaker, who were the most dissolute fellows for miles, would speak in high terms of Abe, and when one cold December morning he was found dead in his long shack, it was a mournful procession that laid his body reverently to rest a few hours later.

Travelers to those parts would linger long over the stone erected by the boys, bearing the strange epitaph, "A dead man must be more useful than a live one." When Abe died, among his earthly treasures were a bundle of pieces of bark on which were scratched numerous notes. These have been preserved and are known around Simon Creek as "Abe's Diary."

Here are some extracts from Abe's Diary. This part is known in Simon Creek as "The Bushman's Creed."

"I believe there is a source in every creek, a root to every tree, and a God at the beginning of both."

"I believe in a sharp arm, a cool head, and a sharp axe with a good shaft."

"I believe the best way to split a tough proposition is to use a good set of wedges, and swing a beadle."

"I believe in a future existence. If I do, I shall make good use of it. I shall leave no stone unturned, and I shall leave no man behind me."

"I believe the strongest part of a pipe is the hemlock, its color, and the noblest thing about a man, his character. The hemlock-blood gives a shade, but the influence of a good character is unbounded."

"I believe there is only one way possible for a tree to fall, and that is the way it leans itself. So with a man."

But for the almost religious care taken of Abe's diary by doing friends, it would have been lost. It is the fate of all other pieces of bark. It is a source of lasting credit to the bushman's wisdom and foresight. It is the unique diary of a bushman, and because he expressed himself in an original way, heedless of the dictatorial pen, it is a masterpiece of the rigid claims of a narrow, race-minded generation, his words immediately new life and presented truth in simple language.

Here are two others of his short philosophical sayings, referring to human life in general.

"The highest form of life in this world is human, and as the acorn is to the oak, so human life contains the seed of something greater."

"A tree that bears branches on one side only cannot grow stately."

Regina Living Prices.

Regina is no place for a man to live who is out of a job. The cost of living is higher than in Winnipeg.

It is noticed most, however, in food-stuffs and house rent. The driving out of the rancher and the devotion of the farmer entirely to his crops make it necessary to ship in the meat supply. One will find that in the eating house, Italian mutton or American bacon.

Sirloin steak is about 22 or 23 cents. This, of course, is the opportunity of the settlers in the northern part of the province who go into mixed farming and raise cattle and hogs very largely.

Prices in Regina are not so high as in some cases than in nearby towns, the dealers apparently charging all that they can get. Last week, when fresh eggs were 30 cents a dozen, they could be bought for 20 cents at Pense 16 miles away. The coal bill is an other important item here. Pennsylvania hard coal is $12 or $12.50, a ton, while the C.P.R. mines at Bassett Hill is $11. Gas coal from Lethbridge, 47 to 48 cents. Lignite, a fairly good steam coal, is found south of the city, and can be laid down there for about $3.50.

In the matter of house rent, the owner of a frame house out toward the outskirts of the city—and not by any means a warm winter house—does not hesitate to ask $4.00 for it and he gets $4.00 monthly rent. There is about 33 feet frontage.

The Timber Census.
The census of the forest products of Canada, to be taken on 1st June, 1911, will embrace square, fancy or flat timber, logs for lumber and miscellaneous products.

In the first class are included ash, birch, elm, maple, oak, pine and all other timber cut as square, fancy or flat, and in the enumeration will be reported for cubic feet and value.

Logs for lumber, which are included in the second class, are such things as elm, hickory, hemlock, oak, pine and spruce. They will be enumerated in the census by quantities of 1,000 feet board measure, with value in the same unit.

Coughs Up a Lizard.
A rare case occurred at Brandon recently. Reginald Duckworth, stepson of Adam Adair, who has been very ill, during a severe coughing attack brought up a three-inch lizard. Duckworth is recovering rapidly.

HOW ONE WOMAN REGAINED HEALTH

Utterly Helpless and Friends Did Not Expect Her to Get Better.

The great fame of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is due to the fact that they have restored to active health a strong, healthy woman, who when all other treatment had failed to cure, and who had come to believe themselves hopeless, chronic illness.

One of the most striking cases is that of Mrs. Henry Britton, 1284 Alexander Avenue, Winnipeg, Man., adds another striking case to the truth of this assertion.

Mrs. Britton writes as follows concerning her wife's long illness and ultimate cure by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. "It is a simple thing to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and yet it is difficult to express fully one's heartfelt gratitude for such a marvellous remedy, as they have restored my wife to health and strength after the best efforts of the medical fraternity had failed. For years prior to our coming to Canada, and since that time up to about three years ago, my wife had been subject to severe illnesses from what the doctors called chronic anemia. She was utterly and entirely helpless, and so weak that she had to be lifted in and out of bed by two or three men. The trouble was aggravated by recurrent rheumatism and heart trouble, and she was unable to get strength for anything. I employed the best medical attendance, and she was treated by the best physicians and ordered beef tea and wine. The tonics and medicine would relieve her a trifle, but when they would slip back once more into the old state—bad worse if anything. The case seemed to me to be a hopeless one, but all seemed of no avail. One evening while reading a newspaper, I came across an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It told the case of a young woman who had been a sufferer from chronic anemia, and who testified to having been cured through the use of these Pills. The case seemed to describe very closely the symptoms of my wife, and although I had pretty nearly lost all hope of her getting well again, I decided to get a supply of the Pills and urged her to use them. My wife was thoroughly disinclined to use them, but she expected it was only another case of money thrown away. However, she began taking the Pills, and I thank God she did, for after she had begun to return, and she who had been looked upon as a helpless invalid began to take a new interest in life. She continued taking the Pills, and through their use her health continued to improve. Until she was able to heartily congratulate her upon her complete restoration to health. Some three years have since passed, and at that time she has never been bothered in the slightest degree with the old trouble. The cure has astonished everyone who knows how ill she had been, and we acknowledge with heartfelt thanks our gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which literally brought her back to health from the brink of the grave."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure such cases in this just one way—they actually make new blood, which fills the depleted veins and brings new strength to every nerve and every organ in the body. Nearly all the everyday ailments of life come from poor or watery blood, and it is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new blood that they cure anemia, indigestion, headaches, aches and backaches, rheumatism, neuritis, general weakness and the ailments that grove girls and women do not like to talk about even to their doctors. If you are weak, sick or ailing, no other medicine will cure you so quickly as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NURSING SISTERS AT CAMP.

Canada is Now Equipped Like Armies of the Older World.

Canadian girls, like their sisters everywhere, are not only brave, but having a weakness for brass buttons. For instance, at a dance, what chance has a half-paraded civilian where there are military cadets? So in Canada this feminine admiration for things militant has been only passive, while in the rest of the world the girls of the Dominion have been largely content to be mere spectators of the splendours of military pomp, sometimes it is true being carried away by the glitter, and then expressing their effervescent spirits in smart cadets in amateur theatricals or at the college masquerade. Till this year in Canada there were no real soldier girls—live soldier girls, who could reel off the Militia list and gossip volubly of the summer camp.

June, 1910, is somewhat of a memorable date in the history of military Canada; six girls went to Niagara camp in full regalia—and for once the dashing captains in their new plumage were not the heroes. There were heroines—Nursing Sisters Morris, Leischman, McGiffin, Daymon, Russell and Hamilton. On the pretty blue uniforms are shoulder straps, and the brass buttons on the epaulettes indicate that each of the young ladies is dignified with the rank of lieutenant during her stay in camp.

The Nursing Sisters are attached to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and they are a step in advance for the corps, another example of the progress which has been made in the Militia during the past ten years; which has substituted the Army Service Corps for the bullock contractor, and organized the Army Medical Corps in place of the regimental doctor and his slim, black bag, turning it into a medical corps, and a credit to its system.

"What useful purpose is served by bringing trained nurses to a summer military camp?" the sceptic will ask. Talk to Col. Fenelon, C.O. Field Ambulance No. 10. He will dilate upon the advantage of the nurse with military experience.

"Nursing experience to be found in summer camp?" you say. "Fah!" Then ask the military assistants who will quietly laugh at your incredulity, and tell you how dead wrong you are.

This year there were eleven days of Niagara camp. Now for the casualty list. In that period out of 4,000 soldiers, 129 sick and 129 wounded were cared for by the Nursing Sisters. The casualties ranged from indigestion and malaria down to the list to colds and pneumonia.

One case of appendicitis was recorded—quite notable, for the victim for the first time in the Canadian military history was operated on, and successfully too, in the open air.

What of the hospital equipment at Niagara? Eight tents comprised the hospital, each tent a ward containing the beds of the sick. The hospital was, therefore, 48 patients and the maximum was well averaged.

As an example of the equipment, the tents were regularly painted, the sick were attended by the patient, his progress and treatment, were set down. In fact the canvas of the hospital was a masterpiece of epitome—one difference; the ozone flapped through the tent walls, changing away from the atmosphere.

The innovation of the Nursing Sisters at Niagara camp was a distinct success. It is understood that the Militia Department will consider it to invite more trained nurses from the big hospitals to the summer camps, and the role of the Dominion. This policy would bear fruit in case of active service; the girls who have learned the routine of the regimental lines would then be able to superintend the operations of the military hospitals which would be established.

A Versatile Soldier.
Chartered accountant, graduate in agriculture, and a soldier, Lieut. Col. James George Ross is one of the most all-round men in Montreal, where he was born in 1861. He has seen long service in the Canadian militia; beginning with the Ontario Field Battery at Guelph in 1879. At that time he was placing up part of his education at the O.A.C. Just after he got his degree of B.A. from Guelph he was sent to the Victoria Military College at the time the C.P.R. was making a nose into the province. After an extensive tour in the West he returned to Montreal, and was sent into accounting in his father's office. At the same time he linked up with the Victoria Rifles, became identified with all the athletic and club life there was in Montreal—as well as much of its financial development, being soon at the head of his deceased father's firm. Snowshoe runner, life member of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association, expert canoeist, crack player of Britannia Football Club—particularly on snowshoes, however, he made a name, but several medals and medals on the wickers. But always interested in the militia, he went from the Victoria Rifles to the 5th Royal Highlanders, of which he became lieutenant-colonel.

Shorter, But Not Usher.
The English word "typist," as applied to a stenographer, as become familiar through the newspaper columns of the capture of Dr. Crippen and Miss Lenoze. The word is much more concise than stenographer, and might well be substituted in its compound.

The words "lift" and "tram" of a street car, have also the advantage of brevity. The vocabulary of many things in England is preferable to that we in Canada employ.

Both Were Seared.
Charles Fox of Long Lake, near Brockville, met a black bear on the highway recently, and he escaped. The bear climbed a slender tree. The limb on which he stood broke and he fell to the ground directly in front of him. The bear became enraged, as well as Fox, and both ran away in opposite directions.

During the first half of the month this Company mined, working single shifts entirely, 25285 tons notwithstanding some delays, the actual average per working 10 hour day being, during that period 2055.6 tons.

For repairing, cleaning, dyeing and pressing, call at Kennedy's tailor shop.

The Board of Managers of the Institutional church met Wednesday evening in the church. Among the matters discussed was the use of duplex envelopes. These will be circulated amongst the subscribers and adherents of the church. This is the method advocated by the Laymen's Missionary movements, which has accomplished great things in many churches.

Special children's day service will be held in the Institutional church, Sabbath morning.

M. J. H. Moore will preach at the evening service in the Institutional church.

Rev. T. M. Murray will conduct Dedictory Services at Hillcrest on Sabbath 25th.

Rev. F. M. Murray visited Crow's Nest on Tuesday evening holding a short service at the Boarding House.

Mr. J. Good has his brother visiting with him from the East.

Mrs. C. Phillips is in the hospital at Coleman. She is doing nicely and will soon be able to be about again.

One of the features of the service in St. Albans church last Sunday was the excellent singing of a full choir of good voices, together with good congregational singing made the service a pleasure. It is hoped that as the choir becomes permanently established, the service will become much improved.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Riley now knows what it is to be isolated, a la Kaiser.

West Coleman is now an enlightened community. Woe to the lamp lights.

The lady voters in Coleman want seats on the council board.
We refer them to Mr. Williams.

Coleman should celebrate her natal day in a manner befitting
the occasion.

The dream of incorporation is a real vision of a road to West West.

If no more candidates offer themselves Wm. Evans will have the floor of the house all to himself.

The wheat crop in three provinces is estimated at 91,700,000 bushels. A dry year at that and wheat one dollar.

Lethbridge is adopting the commission form of government. Lethbridge does not take long to assimilate good ideas.

The pay-day last Saturday was the heaviest on record. We hope this continues forever. Its the best smile producer in camp.

There is only one candidate for Mayor. That is sufficient as the candidate is an ideal candidate. His coming worship, Mayor Cameron.

What we owe to West Coleman may now never be written as Coleman is paying up her debt in that direction slowly but sure.

No citizen should shirk his duty on election day. Your franchise was only won after hard fighting. No one should think lightly of it.

Frank Oliver may resign and be appointed Lieutenant Governor. Frank can always be depended on to deliver the goods.

Judging by the number of Canadian magazines devoted to outdoor life, Canada is bound to become soon, a mecca for tourists and hunters from all parts of the world.

Now since Coleman is incorporated, the government should see that the law is properly carried out in regard to the liquor act. Coleman is the only town in the Pass under the new Ordinance entitled to a wholesale liquor license. Coleman should get benefits which are rightfully hers.

Not a minute should be lost when a shows symptoms of croup. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy given as soon as the child becomes coarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevail. Sold By All Dealers.

FUNERAL

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Higgins died on Wednesday night. The child had been seriously ill for some months. Interment took place on Thursday afternoon at the R.C. cem-eter. The Rev. Father Lajot conducted the services and T.
W. Davies the undertaking.

Miss Baxter, Miss Westwood
R. B. Buchanan, C. Ouimette,
Alex. Cameron and E. Mac-Donald attended the Lawn
Tennis dance at Frank on Tuesday.

Kenneth Fessenden, editor of the Nelson News, was a visitor at the Mines office this week.

The District Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement met at Coleman on Monday evening. Reports were received and plans agreed upon for the furthering of the work.
Literature will be procured on the Movement and will be distributed to the men of the different churches in the district.
Lectures may be arranged for later. The committee would thank the ladies who gave so willingly, and worked so heartily to make the banquet a success.

T. B. BRANDON Editor

Coleman, Friday, Sept. 23, 1910

The recent utterances of President Taft and Premier Laurier have brought about another agitation for a reciprocity treaty between the two countries. The factional war between the "old guard" and the insurgents of the Republican party is based on the tariff question. The Aldrich-Payne bill intensified the situation and brought the low tariff party together with a common fighting plank. These are plainly and unmistakably signs of a growing favor for a reciprocity treaty between the two peoples.

The recent agitation for a reduction of the cost of living came direct from the people who have been continually taxed for every necessity of life. These taxes have enriched those who have joined forces for the aggrandisement of predatory wealth. Panded together with a vicious venal desire, they have gone on relentlessly to almost the breaking point. At last the people are demanding redress and reprisals. Only a straight reduction in the tariff and a general breakup of the combines will now satisfy the consumers. The retreat has been sounded.

A treaty with mutual benefits would satisfy both Canada and the United States.

The products of the soil which are particularly adopted to certain sections and states of each country and can of necessity be produced more cheaply than in others, can be exported at a low cost to the consumers. The products of the farm, mine and forest are above all the vital producers of wealth. On them hinge our foodstuffs, and our manufactured articles. To give these to the consumer at a low cost without injuring the national revenue is a live question to-day. If Canada and United States are to remain true commonwealths legislation along these lines is needed at once.

Record Lump of Coal

A single lump of coal weighing 1200 pounds holds the record around Edmonton, Alta. This was recently taken from a 15 foot seam in the shaft sunk on the Pembina Coal Company's property, about 60 miles west of Edmonton, on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

This is the property of the Duke of Southerland and Cecil
Ward are heavily interested.
The coal is a much higher grade than the Galt or any coal being mined around Edmonton, carrying 58 per cent fixed carbon. A deal is now pending with an English directly adjoining the holding of the Pembina Coal Company.

The prices offered it is understood is $100.00 an acre, or $448.
000 for the property.

Louis Sartori won the patent leather shoes at the Cabinet Bowling alley last month, another valuable prize is being offered.

At the evening service of St.
Albans church on Sunday next the Rev. W. Macdonald will preach on the subject "How all-embracing our love for God should be." During the offertory the choir will render Gounod's
"Praise ye the Father."

WOMAN'S IDEAL HOMEShowing How the Comet Was a Blessing After All.

By A. B. SEARLE

Copyright, 1915, by American Press

"Fellow," said Ned Griggs as they were packing up to leave the university at the close of their college course. "I have a proposition to make. My cousin Loretta Butler—"

"The pretty one you were gallivanting around with on class day?" interrupted Fred Mason.

"The same. She's gone out with a lot of girls and old maids to establish a new woman's institution of some sort. They call it the Woman's Ideal Home. The object is to establish a propaganda for the amelioration of the condition of women."

"Women's rights' votes for women, equal pay for women and all that?" asked Clarence Hughes.

"Exactly. They won't have a man on the premises. Now, I propose that we investigate the home and then, what do you say?"

"That invited me stay, forbidden me go."

"Don't you fool yourself about getting in easily," said Griggs. "You'll have to effect an entrance by strategy."

After a conference the young men decided to write a letter to the president of the Woman's Ideal Home, ostensibly from one of several women desiring to establish a similar institution requesting permission for a committee to inspect the home and look into the constitution and bylaws. As soon as the young men were established in a camp which they had prepared for their summer outing the letter was written, and due time a reply was received inviting the committee to the Woman's Ideal Home.

There were but three out of a dozen young men of sufficient delicate and youthful appearance to warrant their attempting to impersonate women. These were Ned Griggs, Fred Mason and Clarence Hughes.

"Ladies," said the president of the home on receiving them, "I welcome you to our institution in the hope that you may duplicate it, and others may duplicate yours till our land is full of such homes for women."

"Mrs. President," replied Mr. Griggs, "it will be our object to duplicate the work you are doing."

The president designated three elderly maiden ladies to show the visitors the institution. Mason and Hughes were so disgruntled at the selection of these women that they were almost giving away the party by their stifled grins and grimaces. However, the three old maids and the three visitors sallied forth on the tour. At the end of ten minutes there were three old maids and two visitors. One of the visitors had lagged behind and couldn't be found. At the end of twenty minutes there were still three guides, but another visitor was missing. The inspectors seemed to be melting away like John Brown's little Indians in the auditory rhyme. Just half an hour after the start the three old maids stood alone together wondering what they were for.

The first visitor to drop off was Ned Griggs. His cousin, Miss Butler, had recognized him and she had been once in the home and fearing the consequences for him if detected, she had beckoned him to drop behind with a view to getting him out as soon as possible. The second dropper out, Mason, had taken a desperate fancy to a black-eyed girl the party had passed on their tour and concluded to get that information designed to get the boys from her rather than the real lady appointed guides. Hughes, finding himself deserted, told his confidants that he feared something had happened to him and he had better go and look for them. Coming upon a blue-eyed, flaxen-haired girl, he begged her to assist him in his search.

The president was looking over the proofs of an article detailing the objects of the home when the three guides entered. The president looked up, and seeing the ladies alone, was satisfied.

"Where are the ladies you had in charge?" she asked.

"Don't know," said one of the guides.

"Don't know? What do you mean?"

"One after the other they disappeared."

"Good gracious!"

Stepping to a bell button, she pushed it twice, and then a maid came to person immediately at the president's office. In a twinkling old, middle-aged and young ladies came pouring into the room. When they seemed to be no more to come the president ordered:

"Call the roll."

The roll was called. The A's were all present, but when the F's were reached Miss Butler (Loretta) was absent. Among the F's Miss Fairchild (Doris) failed to respond. A third anonymous absence occurred when Waterman (Edison) was called upon to answer.

"Ladies," said the president sternly, "there was something unusual in the appearance of the three visitors that made me hesitate to admit them to the institution. It is evident from their conversation upon the sounding of the alarm that they are somewhere in the building, and the nonappearance of Miss Butler, Fairchild and Waterman, three of the prettiest girls in our home, means that these visitors are—yes, ladies, we may be sure that they are not!"

"Heaven!" exclaimed a hundred voices, and 200 hands were clasped over another hundred bosoms.

"You ladies were appointed to show these three intruders—the premises. Go at once and make sure you find them. Bring them to the three missing girls here. All others remain where you are."

Momentarily there was a concentration of the enemy's forces. The three visitors and the three missing young ladies were in a room together, and the girls knew that the visitors were men who had walked into a house rather than a house of women.

Miss Butler was terror-stricken on behalf of her cousin, and the other two girls sympathized with her. The visitors were started at the sound of the signal order for all to appear in the president's office. Miss Butler, seeing that the battle was on, took command. Two points of retreat were to be considered, the cellar and the cupola. She chose the latter.

"You girls," said to Miss Fairchild and Waterman, "go and report. Leave these boys to me."

"It would not be honorable," said Miss Fairchild, "to let you shoulder the matter. I shall go with you."

"Me, too," said Miss Waterman, her excitement getting the better of her grammar.

The six of them ran up to the cupola and closed the trapdoor behind them. Then they all sat down on the roof, screened from one another by the scintillating railing and seat.

Battles are often won or lost in consequence of some trifling incident, and it was so in this case. One of the searchers whose part was to visit the cupola attempted to open the trapdoor. Since she could not move it, she assumed that it was locked. She was about to go for the key when it occurred to her that if it were locked no one could hide there, so she reported, "nothing found."

When the Whole Country Has Taken Up Hiss and Cry.

Electricity, the post, and the press are the three great enemies of the modern criminal fleeing from justice. As has been seen in the triumphant capture of Dr. Crippen. Within half an hour of the discovery of a great crime, detectives at every port are on the look-out for the criminal. With in a very few hours the police of the Continental and American ports are also watching, while the description and portraits in the newspapers turn the reading world into a corps of amateur detectives.

One of the most sensational pursuits in the history of crime was that after Franz Muller, who, in a Longdon railway train, killed a man called Briggs. In his haste he left his hat behind him in the compartment—a hat with the name of Muller on the band. All England was soon on the hunt for him. Within a few days, a cabman came forward, saying he had bought that very hat for a lodger of his, a man named Muller. Soon after a jeweller, of the ominous name of Deat, said he had in his possession a gold chain of the dead man's, having taken it in exchange from a man of German appearance. And the chase on Muller, but many days passed before the right clue sent detectives, jeweller, and cabman swift Atlantic.

Then he was found in a small sailing ship Muller was on just before she reached port.

In the autumn of 1901 there was the famous case of the Liverpool bank clerk, Goudie, who, by means of a ledger in the trapdoor behind him, escaped in the coolest possible manner. A big room, a big room, the absence of an entry about a certain check, he said it was to be found in a ledger in the trapdoor behind him. Low-clerk was told off to watch him as he went to the other room, but Goudie dodged him in the simplest possible way, and walked barbed wire into the street. The alarm was given in a few minutes, but for eleven days he escaped his pursuers.

BOER VERSUS NATIVE
HOW BOTH WILL DEAL WITH SOUTH AFRICA'S PROBLEM.

Premier's Release of Dinizulu Marks
a New Era in the History of South Africa—Despite His Cause to Hate
the Zulus Louis Botha Has Commenced His Regime With an Act of Clemency.

The initial act of clemency exercised by the Botha Ministry at South Africa was the release of Dinizulu, son of Cetawayo, late paramount chief of the Zulu nation, who was recently convicted of fomenting rebellion. Customary as it is upon the inauguration of a new reign to pardon political prisoners and others guilty of minor offences, the action of Prime Minister Botha and his Cabinet in releasing Dinizulu and then bestowing upon him a pension of £200 per annum during his good behavior, is one of those things which members of Aboriginal Protection Societies never would have believed of former Boer leaders. No doubt it was done advisedly. To a certainty the new regime at South Africa is confident of its ability to make the grotesque figure officially representing the Zulu people—the Royal Zulus—amenable to reason.

To the indomitable chief of the Zulus, Dinizulu will doubtless continue to be hailed as Bayete—the king—but the Zulus are not the only people of the white residents of South Africa, he will be a superannuated person in the eyes of the British and the Zulus, and his influence upon the black races.

Without the assistance of Gen. Botha and his contemporaries, Dinizulu never would have attained to pre-eminence as the successor of King Cetawayo, after the latter's capture and exile. A fratricidal war ensued upon the removal of Cetawayo, his two sons, Dinizulu and Sebepe, and a number of his brothers, for respective impis engaged in warfare, such as the African races alone are capable of in point of savagery. Zululand, rugged and inhospitable, adapted to stratagems peculiar to the peoples. It was nip and tuck as the impis fought, and the Zulus, who were the victors, were the victors. The Boers had triumphed his followers on various occasions, and he made a bargain by which he was to have the farms as their reward for fighting services rendered. They were present at Dinizulu's coronation. It related that for lack of a better piece more decorative, Dinizulu's crown consisted of the remnants of an old hat.

Subsequently, in order to maintain a firmer hold upon Dinizulu and his warriors, and to prevent the Boers of Transvaal from getting control of Zululand, the British Government placed Dinizulu upon the pay roll. Zululand is under the administration of Natal.

Dinizulu grew obese. His life of idleness at his kraals, his devotion to the calash-bell, with native beer, engendered a longing for more power than he had. Pride of ancestry, and the resentment of his subordinate position rankled in the chief. He was required to report so often to the Native Commissioner for Zululand, and he was annoyed to notify the authorities of any and all evidences of treachery. There is little doubt in the minds of those acquainted with Dinizulu's character that he always was at heart a traitor.

The Boer he disliked and the British he despised. He could barter, during the Boer war he donned a discarded khaki uniform, but it was a little of the Boer he was in. His sympathy with the British was for Lord Lyndhurst was calculated to afford malcontents among the Zulus some satisfaction and to confuse the native mind which had all along assumed that the British were indomitable and all powerful. Not until Lyndhurst fell and Pretoria was occupied did Dinizulu co-operate with the British forces. Then he existed in scouting and in preventing the Boers from over-running Zululand and raiding Natal. Zulus and Boers were at it hotly.

Long after the British troops had been withdrawn, Dinizulu sought to frustrate the Botha government. This gave rise to bitterness between Dinizulu and those who had aided him against Sebepe. Irregularly organized by Kitchener, accompanied by Zulus, raided the cattle of the Boers. Dinizulu's impis had been ordered to cut off the Boer commissariat. With the help rendered by the Zulus, the Boers were doing. One of the results of
